Reason for Allowance

1. Regarding claims 1-9, and 16-24, the prior art fails to teach or suggest a method for routing in a peer-to-peer network, the method comprising a step that if an entry is found on the jump table which associates a destination zone with a next unresolved grouping of bits in the fixed portion of the hash key, then routing the message to the destination zone associated with the fixed portion of the hash key, in combination with other limitations, as specified in the independent claims 1, and 16.

Regarding claims 10-15, the prior art fails to teach or suggest a method for use in a peer-to-peer network, the method comprising the steps of associating a fixed portion of hash keys of a hash function with one of a plurality of zones in the peer-to-peer network, where each hash key generated from the hash function is associated with an object in the peer-to-peer network and where the fixed portion of the hash key comprises a string of bits that is further grouped into a number of disjoint groupings of bits; and maintaining state for each zone in the peer-to-peer network regarding the groupings of bits so as to route messages to a destination zone in the peer-to-peer network in a fixed path length, as specified in the independent claim 10.

Regarding claims 25-28, the prior art fails to teach or suggest a node for a peer-to-peer network comprising a second interface to at least one storage device, the second interface storing objects on the storage device where each object stored at the node is associated with a hash key of a hash function where each hash key has a fixed portion associated with a zone of the peer-to-peer network hosted at the node; and a routing processor which can route messages in the peer-to-peer network using the first interface and the state stored on the memory unit so that a message can be routed to a destination zone in the peer-to-peer network in a fixed path length, in combination with other limitations, as specified in the independent claim 25.
